Transit Disruption

Overview:

In the Puget Sound region, many people rely upon public transportation daily to get to school, work, medical appointments and recreational activities. During the World Cup, public transit in and around the greater Seattle area may see high utilization by visitors in addition to regular passengers at peak times. With added traffic and thousands of people moving in and out of the area, public transit may be disrupted or delayed, especially before, during and after matches.

NOTE: Remember, there are two different audiences for messaging - daily commuters and World Cup visitors.
